A German View of The German Fleet's Last Cruise.

"Undefeated," but forced to surrender by a combination of circumstances, the German Fleet for Great Britain "beyond her wildest dreams," say the diary of a German naval officer, the German Fleet went on its last cruise, the end of which was instrument in a British harbor. The entries were written, apparently, on the days when the great German tragedy was being acted out, and the view point of the officer who writes is illuminating. A final touch is his surprise at the perfect discipline aboard the British ships where according to reports that had been industriously circulated in the German navy, the sailors were ready to raise the red flag and join their mutinous German brothers in a general revolution against official tyranny. Previous entries, dealing with the battle of Jutland which the writer claims as a win for Germany on points, explain the insistence of the officer that the fleet went to its surrender "undefeated." The passages below appeared originally in the Tagliche Rundschau, and were translated by the London Times, from which we quote:

Sunday, November 17. (Clouds of smoke and soot lie over war-harbor. If one walks through the streets one arrives home quite black; the fleet is getting up steam. The Wilhelmshaven people are accustomed to this dirt. It was often so during the war when the fleet was suddenly going out for some undertaking or the enemy was reported out at sea by our aircraft and advance patrole.
But today it is quite different; the High Seas fleet is beginning its last cruise, surrendering to the enemy! For four years I have shared victory and want with my crew and I won't leave them in the lurch at the end. Going on board is hard. The red flag is still flying there, a sign of all that has collapsed in these last weeks.
The crew is serious and quiet; most of them feel how great is the disgrace.

Monday, November 18. In the Schilling Roads. Coming through the locks, we have hoisted our war flag and pennant once more.
Everybody on board has the feeling that it looks better, and more dignified than the red flag. The undefeated German Fleet is going out to meet the enemy who anxiously avoided it for years, and says to him: "Here, take us; you have won the game only too brilliantly, and as you can not have imagined in your wildest dreams." I wept, and I am not ashamed of it.

Tuesday, November 19. Soon after noon we put to sea. Not rating ahead as before, but crawling slowly. We must save as much fuel as possible. The North Sea is seldom so calm at this time of year. No lookout for submarines now, and no manning of the guns at night there is a bright stream of light from every ship, and I no longer have to gaze into the darkness trying to spot the enemy.
I can not stop asking myself how we have earned such an end, and whether all our brave seamen are lying for nothing at the bottom of the sea. Who can give an honest answer? What is the truth?

Thursday, November 21. On Wednesday morning one of our destroyers struck a mine and sank. Many are already lying down there, and many more will follow when the mine sweeping begins again. At eight o'clock we are at the appointed place. The first English destroyer soon comes in sight. My heart beats furiously.
If we had still our torpedoes on board I think that that destroyer would have known. So this is a good thing that we left everything behind. The destroyers surround us on every side; we are a procession of prisoners. Our large ships are conveyed in the same way by the English battle ships and cruiser squadrons. The English stood at their battle stations with gas masks on. They simply could not understand that we should surrender without a blow. The English ships are freshly painted. The men are in their best clothes. Everything is arranged to impress us. Slowly we proceed to our anchoring place in the Firth of Forth. Nothing is to be seen of the land, typical Enlish fog. Airmen circle around us playing all sorts of games. One of them who intended to make a particular bold movement falls straight into the sea. An airship also, wobbling clumsily, feels it necessary to show us how well built our Zeppelins are.

Friday, November 22. The search commission is on board. I speak with the British officer only to say what is absolutely necessary. With me they will have no occasion to disobey their strict order not to fraternize with the Germans. Apparently they are less concerned to discover whether we really have no ammunition and weapons aboard than to spy out our equipment. They have little luck in this. All the things which they would so much have liked to see, and about which they constantly asked, instruments for measuring distance, electrical apparatus, and especially the "smoke apparatus," stayed behind in Wilhelmshaven. So they can only observe that we have very pretty guns. For a long time they racked their brains about certain other parts of our armament, the use of which they do not understand.
Unhappily I do not know enough English to explain. Today my English is for the most part limited to "yes" and "no." Sunday, November 24. The German Fleet is being taken to Scapa Flow. There is no further question of our going to a neutral port. If it must be an English port, I like Scapa Flow best, for up there there is at least no mob to laugh at us.
Monday, November 25. Scapa Flow is a splendid harbor, well protected on all sides. The entrance is secured by nets and mine barriers. On shore are huts of the navies about as high as a good German dog's kennel. The English have been lying here for four years. They must have been pretty uncomfortable. It is all the stranger to see how little this naval base has been developed. There is only one miserable dock, and a few small workshops; there is no pier for destroyers. I am relieved by the order that only one officer and nineteen men are to remain on board every destroyer. So I must leave with most of the crew. Almost all those who stay behind have volunteered, partly out of affection for the destroyer, and partly because they hope not to return to Germany under conditions there are normal again.

Monday, December 2. An English battle ship lies not far from us. We see the English sailors on board parading from nine to twelve. We did not do this even in times of deepest peace. Our men are astonished. Those, then, are the sailors who, as we were told, turned back from an undertaking against Germany and had hoisted the red flag. Tomorrow the German steamer will arrive to take us back to Wilhelmshaven.

United Farmers To Meet Non-Partisans One Day
This Week
Calgary, May 6.—It is expected that a meeting will be held this week of the joint committee appointed by the United Farmers of Alberta executive and the Non-Partisan league executive to consider the subject of political action. The special committee was named at a joint meeting of the executives of the two organizations for the purpose of seeking "as far as possible to harmonize and unify all political action on the part of the Non-Partisan League and the United Farmers of Alberta."
The resolution naming the special committee set forth that it was to be composed of seven members, three from each organization, who were to choose their own chairman.
However, when three men were named from each side, they chose one of the U.F.A. members as chairman.
The personnel of the special committee included: U. F. A.: H.
Greenfield, Westlock, chairman; W. D. Trego, Gleichen; and G. D.
Sloane, Cayley. Non-Partisans: William Irvine and Messrs. Wilford and Marshall.
While officials of both organizations are asserting strongly that there is the utmost harmony between them in arriving at a political understanding, there is an apparent overture of opinion on the action of the U. F. A. convention in leaving to the locals in each federal constituency the decision of taking political action was left to each separate convention of U.
F. A. locals, it being the desire of the U. F. A. executive that the locals should develop their own actions and bring forth their own leaders rather than to accept those at the head of either the present U. F. A. or Non-Partisan organizations.

HOW TREATIES ARE DRAFTED

"Scraps of Paper," otherwise known as treaties, require much more time for construction than they do for destruction; so, considering the magnitude and difficulty of the problems involved, insistence with the deliberations of the delegates employed in making the new Treaty of Paris is somewhat unreasonable. For, a writer for the London Magazine tells, speaking of the conference that preceded the formal terminations of other conflicts.

In the Crimean War, for example the conference lasted from Feb. 25th to March 30; in the Spanish American war from Oct. 1 to December 10; in the Russo-Japanese war from August 9th to September 5.

The preparation of the treaty itself is a long task as peace treaties are elaborate documents. Until recent years they were written by hand in the blackest of ink on vellum or on a specially made linen paper known as "treaty paper".

But of late years they have been first typewritten and then printed, all precautions being taken against premature "leaks" in the printing establishments entrusted with the work. Says the writer, continuing the discussion.

Following established precedent treaties of peace practically always begin with an appeal to the Almighty, "Au nom de Dieu tout puissant" being the formula most frequently used. In treaties with Roman Catholic Countries, however, the phrase, "In the Name of the Most Holy and Undivided Trinity" is frequently substituted, while in a treaty with a Mohammedan states, the formula is altered to "In the name of Allah the Almighty God" in the copy allotted to the representatives of that country.

For each of the signatory powers one copy is signed and sealed. These certified copies are for convenience of reference, and for printing duplicate copies from, since original signed and sealed treaty is a most precious and carefully guarded document, and seldom sees the light of day once it is stored away in the state archives of the signatory power.

Peace treaties are not written or printed straight across the page or pages like ordinary documents. They are written in parallel columns, one in English, the next in French, the next in German, Italian and so on, according to the number of languages in use in the signatory powers. The text of each of these columns is an exact translation of the texts of all the other columns, and the utmost care is taken in the selection of the words that will convey identical shades of meaning.

The seals affixed to ratified treaties are usually elaborate, and in order the better to preserve them it is customary to enclose them in little round silver boxes. Most treaties also, are bound in either crimson morocco, or in red velvet, lined about with green silk cord.

Many of the treaties in the British Record Office, however, are stored in cylinders, boxes, portfolios and bags. There are thousands of these documents, all carefully protected. When they were stored in foreign offices, they were kept in five-ton safes that were so carefully protected that when the Emperor Frederick of Germany saw them he smilingly commented to the Earl of Derby, "You are evidently determined that no one shall break your treaties." The treaties in the Record Office include as well as peace treaties, others relating to such matters as boundary rights, boundary questions, commercial regulations. There are also many so-called "domestic treaties" such as Queen Victoria's Marriage Treaty for the Marriage of Princess Charlotte, dated 1816. All these documents are removed to secret places of still greater security during the period of air raids.

There is a very curious story in connection with the only copy of a treaty belonging to a foreign nation that has been for a while stored in the British Archives. In 1877 a sailor called at the Foreign office with a brown paper parcel, which was found to contain the original Bolivian copy of the treaty of September 20, 1840, between Great Britain and Bolivia. Say the article further:

The sailor had, it appeared been present in Bolivia during one of their at that time, periodical revolutions, when the state archives were thrown into the streets by the revolutionists. A thin book bound in crimson velvet, fell at his feet, and stooping he picked it up, and brought it away with him. On examining he found that it was a document of importance, so on his return to England he took it to the Foreign Office in London.

Here it was stored away for safety and forgotten. But eighteen years afterward, that is to say in 1905, the Bolivian Government apparently woke up to the fact that their precious treaty was missing, and communicated with the foreign office, asking if it could oblige them with a certified copy. Search was made with the result that the Government was able to let them have not a copy merely, as asked for, but the original document, so strangely preserved. It was quite perfect, save that the usual wax seal in its silver box was missing. This, doubtless, was looted by the Bolivian mob during the revolution.

Presumably the loss of one of the originals of an international treaty, would not be irreparable among nations that observed ordinary good faith. But in the days of "secret diplomacy," now supposedly departed, the theft or "borrowing" of a treaty for purposes of publication was a serious matter. On this point the writer comments.

Altho modern treaties are so carefully guarded in this country even the certified copies are jealously kept from prying eyes have occurred where their contents have been prematurely and illicitly made public. One notorious instance of this occurred in connection with the publication by The Globe Newspaper of the full text of the secret Anglo-Russian Treaty of May 1878. This was published in June, on the eve of the Congress of Berlin, and the disclosures caused consternation in Russian and England alike.

The affair was traced to a Foreign Office Clerk named Marvin, who had secretly made a copy of the document, which he sold to The Globe. He was arrested, but as the Official Secrets Act had not been passed, it was held that no charge could lie against him, and he was discharged.

An earlier case of the kind occurred in 1827, when the Times published the text of the treaty signed on July of that year between Great Britain and France, and Russia. The mystery of how the newspaper in question obtained possession of the text of this high confidential document has never been cleared up to this day. As, however, the originals of the treaties were at that time stored in cupboards with glass doors, and fitted with ordinary locks, in a private house in Whitehall, used as an annex to the War Office, it is not difficult to see how an unscrupulous person might have obtained access to them.

Days gone by the signing of a peace treaty would have been hailed with glee by the higher clerks and officials of our Foreign Office, since it was customary to mark such auspicious occasions by a large distribution of money gifts among those most nearly concerned.

These gifts came from the Governments of the foreign states with whom the treaties were made and were frequently of considerable value. Thus, in 1793, a sum of $10,000 was received from the Russian Government for distribution among the under secretaries and chief clerks of the British Foreign Office on the occasion of two treaties between our King George III and Empress of Russia.

The King of Sardinia, in the same year, sent $2500 of the same kind. These gifts were also forwarded by the Spanish, Prussian, Austrian, and Sicilian governments. These "good old times" must indeed have been "good" ones for the officials concerned, since the whole of these large sums was divided between about ten or twelve people. In 1831, however, this practice was discontinued.

In conclusion the writer states that the first signature of the new treaty of Paris should be that of the representative of Germany. This is because precedent demands that the original copy of peace treaty shall be signed in Alphabetical Order of the Various countries' names, and the official title of Germany, Deutsches Reich, comes first on the list. America will sign under her official title of United States of America, Austria as Österreich, and Brazil as Estados Unidos do Brazil.

Even after all the representatives of the contracting Powers have affixed their signatures and seals to the treaty, however, it has to be ratified by the actual rulers of the countries, who also sign and seal it.

MOBE GARAGES

Lacombe is going to be well supplied with garages in the near future, no less than four new ones being under consideration. As we already have three, it can easily be seen that when we have four more new ones, giving us a total of seven, car owners in this district will receive real service. One garage will be located in the old Gourlay Building on Allan St., one will be built on Delmage St. near the Empress Hotel; Davey and Craigen will erect a modern brick garage on the corner of Barnett Ave. and Alberta St., while there are prospects that the Winter Barn, on the Avenue will be converted into a hostelry for horseless vehicles. In addition to the above seven, Frank McElear is thinking of putting twenty or thirty thousand dollars into a Garage on Nanton Street, the last recently vacated by the billiard hall and Ole Boode, McLaughlin Dealer, may be prevailed upon to spend some of his filthy lucre in erecting a showroom and sales room for his cars. The automobile business, certainly looks good here.

Wedding

MacKenzie-Broderon

At the home of the brides parents, Leedale, Alberta, a very pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday afternoon, March 23, at 4.30 p.m. Anna Laura, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Broderon was united in marriage to Robert Murray MacKenzie, son of Mr. and Mrs. John MacKenzie of Castletown, Cathness Shire, Scotland, a Calgary Live-stock buyer.

The bride who was given away by her father was gownned in white georgette crepe-de-moir, with conventional veil, carrying a bouquet of white carnations, attended by little Isabel George, of Lacombe, as flower girl, daintily frocked in white crepe-de-chine and sky blue sash, and carried a basket of pink and white carnations. Mrs. Ethel Paddison was the bridesmaid, who was becomingly gowned in bat-tledish grey satin, with gold trimming and wore a large hat of dust grey crepe, trimmed with chenille braid and carrying a bouquet of carnations. The groom was attended by Leonard Paddison, also of Lacombe. Rev. A. T. Barr B.A. B.D. performed the ceremony. Then the Mendelssohn Wedding March, played by Anna Laura Christina Broderon, only sister of the bride. After the signing of the register the wedding breakfast was served. The table was prettily decorated with baskets of white carnations, centered by the bride's cake.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold wish bone pin, with a wedding bell centre, and to the best man a pearl tie pin. A reception and dance was held from 8.30 to 3.30. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Broderon received with the bride and groom, after which Mr. and Mrs. R. M. MacKenzie left for Calgary, Chicago, Springfield, Mass. and sail from New York to Castletown Scotland, and on their return will reside at Georgian Court Calgary. Mr. and Mrs. R. M. MacKenzie were the recipients of many extremely handsome gifts.

The guests at wedding were: John MacKenzie, brother of the groom, Donald Hendry, both of Calgary; Miss Phemie Reid, Camrose; Mrs. Josephine Simmons, Blackie; Dr. Hynes and wife, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Campbell, Miss Isabelle Simpson, Lient. E. H. A. Martin and wife; Mr. and Mrs. Frank George and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. McDermott, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Paddison, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. OUR SOLDIER DEAD

"In Flanders fields, where poppies blow,"

In France where beautiful roses grow.

There let them rest—forever sleep—

With our heart's love—with our Souls pray'r.

For all our Fallen "Over there,"

The earth is sacred where they fell—

Forever on it lies the spell

Of hero deeds in Freedom's cause

And men unborn shall come and pause

To say a prayer, or bow the head.

So leave these graves to hold their dead.

Let not our sighing nor our tears

Fall on them through the coming years.

Who on the land, on sea, in air,

With dauntless courage every-where,

Their homes and country glorified—

Stood to their arms, and spilling died.

Great France will leave no need

That we place flowers on their tomb—

And proudly offer their resting place.

Will float forever in its grace,

O'er cross and star, and symbol too.

Their own beloved country's flag.

The morning sun will gild with light,

The stars keep holy guard at night,

The winter spread soft pall of snow,

The summer flowers about them grow.

The sweet birds sing their spring-time call,

God's love and merry guard them all.

The result of your years crop depends on the accuracy and

"Mothers Day"

"If you've a grey haired mother In the old home far away, Sit down and write the letter You've put off day by day; Don't wait until her tired steps Reach heaven's pearly gate, But show her that you think of her before it is too late."

"If you've a tender message Or loving word to say, Don't wait till you forget it;
But whisper it today.
Who knows what bitter memories May haunt you if you wait?
So make your loved one happy, Before it is too late."

trict Red Cross for the month of The secretary has received the following letter from Provincial Headquarters which all members and interested ones should read:

The Canadian Red Cross.

May 1st 1919.

Dear Sir or Madam:

We desire to direct your attention to the most helpful form of service which may be undertaken by branches and members of the Red Cross association at the present time. While awaiting the announcement of the peace time policy of the Red Cross, members and workers are urged to co-operate in an endeavor to meet the immediate needs which are before us, and to foster a better knowledge and understanding of what the Red Cross society is and what it stands for.

REMEMBER
(1) Every Branch of the Red Cross Society is a part of a great international organization, governed by treaty and convention.
At this moment, members of the international Red Cross Committee are in session at Cannes, considering ways and means of making the world a happier and healthier place to live in.

(2) Members of the Red Cross are members of a world organization. The call of the Red Cross is a call to service.
(3) Many people are suffering at the present time from apathy and reaction after the long strain of War. Do not be discouraged if you meet at the moment, with a falling off in subscriptions or lack of sympathy. Tell people what the Red Cross means: tell them the work it is doing now.
As soon as possible we will tell you what it means to do.

SUGGESTIONS—Supplies.
The following supplies are needed and material for making may be obtained at the provincial depot:

(1) Women's and Children's garments for emergency and special work at home. URGENT.

(2) Cotton Flannel sheets for Tubercular cases. URGENT.

(3) Pillows, URGENT. Branches may obtain ticks ready cut and can secure ticking by the bolt.
Feathers should be thoroughly cleaned, only down feathers used.

(4) Quilts, patchwork. Materials may be obtained from the provincial depot. It is suggested that branches should hold Quilting Parties. Names of branches or workers may be placed on quilts.

WOOLEN GOODS.
(5) Sweaters, heavy wool. These are greatly needed both at the Ports and at home. During the past six months, the Alberta branches have been obliged to purchase 606 sweaters to meet demands.

Money is urgently needed, and donations are asked for:
(1) The General Funds of the Society, which will be used for Emergency and Relief work and for meeting the many demands made upon the Red Cross in supplying comforts and equipment to Military Hospitals throughout Alberta.

(2) Equipping and up-keep of Rest Rooms for the temporary accommodation of soldiers' families arriving in Calgary. (see circular previously issued.) Estimated cost $2,000.

(3) Recreation Room and other equipment at the New Colonel Belcher Military Hospital, Calgary.
Estimated cost $3,000.

(4) Red Cross Recreation Hut at Mount View Hospital, for the use of Tubercular soldiers. Estimated cost $600.00.

(5) Rest and recreation rooms at Armouries. Estimated cost $800.00.

(6) Nurses Fund. For payment of Red Cross Nurse from Alberta Branch travelling on trains in charge of soldiers' wives and children. Estimated cost $800.00.

(7) Special Fund. Money donated to this fund will be used for relief of special cases of distress and hardship, brought to the notice of the Red Cross, and not available for assistance from any other fund.

TO WORKERS.

This is a busy time of the year for all. The Red Cross appreciates the splendid work that the men and women of Alberta have done in the past four years. Now that peace seems near at hand and the demand for supplies is no longer unlimited, we believe that the Red Cross should take its place in the lives of men and women as a friend Not making undue demands upon their time, but to be worked for and thought of as a common bond of fellowship of humanity. Great needs await our help. We urge upon you to hold together this organization of which you are members, and to assist in carrying on the work which must be done.

Trusting that you will endeavor to co-operate with us in carrying out these suggestions.

Our attention was called to an error which we made recently. In the announcement and report of the Easter Supper and Bazaar we neglected to state that the Help-the Ladies' Aid in preparing and carrying out this enterprise. We are sorry we made this mistake.

Messrs. S. Nicholson and sons have installed a Hinean Milking Machine at their Dairy Farm. It is reported to be working splendently. We believe this is a new departure in this locality and hope it will be a successful one. Mr.
Nicholson expects to have about 30 cows milking this summer and the machine will save a lot of hard and tedious labor.

Every cottage at Gull Lake is rented for this season, and there is still a great demand for accommodation. Accommodation is the one thing that will keep the development of this summer resort back. People from the cities are anxious to come here, but with the exception of those who can be accommodated at the hotel, there is absolutely no place for them to stay. Mr. and Mrs. Doherty moved out to the lake last week, and are getting the Lake View Hotel ready for the season, which will open in June. Several parties are after the Thistle Inn, which can accommodate about 20 visitors, and it is most desirable that this place be opened this season. It is the intention of the village Council to put down three wells this season, for the accommodation of visitors. The question of water supply has up till now been a severe handicap to the lake visitors, many women having had to carry water half a mile or more, and the ratepayers are of the opinion that the taxes could not be spent to better advantage than in sinking wells.

Italians Maintaining Their Protest

Rome, Friday, May 2—News-papers favorable to the government protest against the continuation of the peace conference or negotiations with German delegations, without the participation of Italy, because they say, it violates the treaty between the Allies forbidding a separate peace.

The Tribune says: "The Allies are pledged to us by a sacred treaty, they cannot sign a treaty without us and they cannot make a separate peace without treason. President Wilson may be an autocrat, but not to the point of imposing the stamp of treason upon Great Britain and France."

The Idea Nazionale asks how the peace conference could declare the league of nations approved unanimously last Monday, while Italy was absent; how the conference could give Kiao-Chau to Japan and when Italy was not present, and how can conference present the preliminaries of peace to the delegates, without Italy acting with them. The paper adds:

"The conference places itself outside the alliance of Italy. Italy must answer by the annexation of the territory she claims."
